

Spiritual Maturity

"Sally" was sent on a fascinatingly random dual assignment. Someone is paying her to do X, and God has directed her to do Y. Fun stuff.

She showed up for day one and God hijacked her magnificently, showing His lovely grasp of some very old treasures she had forgotten she had, and a very new one that just came to her. He wove them together effortlessly.

She flowed today. No initial learning curve. There was grace on the day and she was IN THE RIVER.

BUT . . . the real story is her attitude about the future. Neither of the two assignments is over, so she will be back on task tomorrow.

Here is what she wrote.

"Because I sure wasn't expecting Him to ask me to _____ today. But I'm so glad He did! And I'm quite curious to see what will be next. I sure have my ideas, but none of those were on the menu today. We'll see what tomorrow holds."

And I'm quite curious to see what will be next.

THAT, Tribe, is called worship.

She has never done this assignment before. She has a lot of tools in her tool kit. She is no newbie. She is willing to rummage through her tool kit and use the tried and true oldies.

But her ASSUMPTION is that God is up to something fun, and tomorrow will be a new facet of warfare, and she is on tiptoe with anticipation over what God might show up and do.

No fear.

Now ponder the difference between obedience and worship.

Many people have been given a tough assignment, they were not sure they could do. And they soldiered up, showed up in spite of the anxiety, and executed well.

This is the stuff of Subjects of the Great King. Obedience in spite of fear.

But NOBLE Subjects have such confidence in the majesty and the mysteries of the Most High, that they can walk into the unknown, with anticipation, trusting in the wisdom, skill and sense of humor of their King.

Sally is a NOBLE Subject of the Great King.

Kudos to you, Sally. You set the bar high for the rest of us.

And we are looking forward to celebrating with you the surprise of the day, tomorrow.
